

52 Langston Avenue
Harlem, New York
60640

Dear Mrs. Luella Bates Washington Jones,

It's been a while since I have seen you, but I still feel that glitch of guilt for the night that I tried to snatch your pocketbook .I am very sorry, Ma'am. I wasn't thinking about anything else other then those blue suede shoes.

You told me things that no one has ever told me before. Your greatest words of wisdom to me was when you said that you to were young once and wanted things too. It made me realize that no one is perfect. Even though I tried to take something that was yours all you did was give food, a chance to wash my face and brush my hair. I can never repay your kindness Ma'am. I am not sure if you know this but your words if kindness change my life forever.

Mrs. Jones, I am very sorry again for trying to snatch your pocketbook. You could of turned me over to the police that night. You choose not to. You gave me a life lesson that I have never forgot I hope one day I can become a person filled with kindness, empathy, wisdom, courage, self pride and confidence just like you Ma'am .

Sincerely,

Roger

P.S Thank-you Ma'am